

SOUTHEASTERN LAW LIBRARIAN

Newsletter of the Southeastern Chapter of A.A.L.L.
VOLUME 26 NUMBER 2 Spring 2001

Greetings from the President

May, 2001

Atlanta 2001: Southeast Meets Southwest—Librarians' Odyssey was a fitting title for an excellent meeting. There were well over 200 SEAALL members at this combined SEAALL and SWALL gathering. Special thanks go to our President Cathy Lemann and to Local Arrangements Co-Chairs, Rhea Ballard-Thrower and Nancy P. Johnson. The Atlanta hospitality, food, and weather were perfect! The Opening Reception at Emory's Michael C. Carlos Museum was a wonderful event. The exhibit, "Mysteries of the Mummies: the Art and Archeology of Death in Ancient Egypt" was fascinating. Jo Ann Pinder, Director of the Gwinnett County Public Library, gave an inspiring speech to our Friday Conference Luncheon. The remarks of AALL Vice-President/President Elect, Barbara Bintliff also were enlightening. The Friday evening trivia challenge was an added bonus. Billie Jo Kaufman and the 2002 Ft. Lauderdale crew have been given an excellent local arrangements model to follow.

The 2001 Program Committee members included Steve Jordan, Clare Membiela Donnelly, Carol Allred, Maurine Mattson, Penny Gibson, Laura Story, Sue Burch and Rebecca Trammell. As evidenced by the program evaluations, these folks did an outstanding job of putting together top quality educational programs. I want to extend my appreciation to those who gave service to SEAALL by participating on a program this year. Please let your new Program Chair, Terry Long, know what programs you would like to attend next year.

The list of SEAALL committee members for 2001-2002 is included in this newsletter. (Some terms of service will extend through 2003). We have had a tremendous response from members willing to serve on SEAALL committees. It is my intention to find a place for any SEAALL member who volunteers to serve. Let me know if you still want to participate. I hope that we can continue to reach out to law firm librarians, academic librarians, state law librarians, county law librarians, court librarians, and to our support staff colleagues. What a privilege it is to associate with the terrific individuals who comprise our SEAALL chapter!

Just a few thoughts about networking and forming partnerships. As I sat at my desk today I thought how valuable it has been to my professional development to work with other librarians who are willing to share information, knowledge, ideas and suggestions. Certainly SEAALL meetings are times to capitalize on renewing or forming professional relationships. Law librarians, however, partner with our constituents on a daily basis. We build bridges to vendors, legal writing directors, law faculty, law firm administrators, judges, and law school deans. In all of these encounters we can come away strengthened and renewed. May our SEAALL membership continue to embody the finest characteristics that our profession has to offer as we continue to give selfless service.

Editor's Note —

This will be my last issue. While I'll miss being the first to know lots of interesting information about our members, I'm ready to let Michael Klepper (University of Virginia) and the 2001-2002 committee take over! I'd like to acknowledge my colleagues at UK — Amy, Carol, Matt, Gloria, Nancy, Janice, A.F., Sharon, Dee, Heather, Donna, Joyce, Herb (now at LSU), and Ebba Jo (now retired). They provided creative advice, helped with software snafus, applied mailing labels, lugged boxes to the Post Office, and pitched in whenever I asked. Thanks, you guys!

SEAALLers, please help Michael and his committee by sending him articles, photos, AALL or SEAALL committee information, etc. It will make his job a lot easier. Good luck, Michael!

And a final thanks to the 2000-2001 Newsletter & Public Relations Committee: Merrill Chertok, alexlaw@erols.com; Michael Klepper, mtk@virginia.edu; Lisa Smith-Butler, smith-butler@nsu.law.nova.edu; and Connie Matzen, cmatzen@smithlaw.com

The Usefulness of Translation Software Programs

Roy Balleste, Reference/ Electronic Services Librarian
Shepard Broad Law Center
Nova Southeastern University Law Library & Technology Center

Advances in technology benefit all of us in many ways. Many libraries have turned to technology in the hopes of providing better reference services to their visitors. Many have developed useful websites that provide exceptional information. This information is accessed by many around the world, but not all necessarily have a good proficiency of the English language. The twenty-first century just started and promises to be an age of globalization. Those who are willing to expand their horizons will receive the fruits of an accessible new market.

In today's legal environment, geographical boundaries have faded away and the Internet has created bridges across distance. The Internet future promises to make any remaining barriers of communication, almost, if not completely, nonexistent. Along with these considerations, we should remember that Reference services are one of the most important missions of any law library and good customer service goes along with it. How do you guarantee that your patrons access the information posted in your web pages? Should they be expected to be proficient in English? What if you, the librarian, want to obtain information from a web page written in French. In all these situations, law librarians should consider the role of machine-based translation software programs to ease information retrieval. How do they work?

It is important to me, for example, to be able to translate a web site designed in a foreign language. But it is just as important that foreigners be able to translate my web site from anywhere in the world. Translation software programs are a great tool to enhance your library web page. These programs are an easy and cost efficient way of allowing your web page visitors to translate your page into their native language and the ability for a librarian to translate somebody else's web page. With a click of a button, the user can translate the main text of a site into their native language. Keep in mind that big giants such as AltaVista and Microsoft are already using translator programs to ease the web surfing needs of their customers.

All programs work on the language pair premise. For example, they will offer you several language pairs, i.e. English-Spanish, English-French, Italian-English, etc. The programs provide translation of the most common and widely used languages. As in everything in technology, the future promises more and better results. I will humbly point out, that for any person who does not speak English, the software would be very helpful. If I could not speak English, I think that the software would be an oasis in a world full of Aforeign sites@. If you are still somewhat skeptical, then try it yourself. AltaVista provides a great example of this service and is free. (Babel Fish online translator) You may visit their website at <http://babelfish.altavista.com/translate.dyn>.

You might still have many questions. What software powers AltaVista's Babel Fish? What companies offer translation software programs? What about their quality? What about cost? Do you have a favorite? For further information, including the programs I researched, and for a broader discussion of this topic, please read my upcoming article: "Could you translate this site for me? Yes, Sí, Oui. Rating the Usefulness of Translation Software Programs for Law Library Websites," to be published in the June edition of AALL Spectrum.
