STATEMENT: ALL-SIS has been a very active organization, although it would be nice to involve more of our members in that activity. Our strategic planning efforts have given us stability and direction for the future. Our roundtables, the Directors and Middle Managers meetings, and our educational programs give us a wide variety of activities for professional development and networking. We need to strengthen programs that mentor and nurture academic librarians so they don't burn out, as well as encourage people to enter our profession.

While the ALL-SIS listserv is a great vehicle for communication, perhaps we could make more use of it and hold discussion forums - maybe the roundtables could moderate these forums and generate more interest in their activities. We also need to make sure that ALL-SIS is a group that has room for all levels of academic librarians. We should follow up with those who attend our CONALL program and make sure that the issues that come up for them after their first year are addressed either by programming or communication efforts.

Professional activity has always been rewarding for me. I have learned valuable lessons and met wonderful people. I have no doubt that I am a better librarian because of these experiences. I would be honored to use that experience as an officer of ALL-SIS.
