This syllabus is for an intensive week-long online one-credit winter session Environmental Law Research course. It could also be taught during summer session. The class ran from Monday to Friday. Students participated daily by completing assigned readings, viewing an instructional PowerPoint, participating in online discussion, and completing a research exercise. In addition, students compiled a regulatory history of an assigned environmental regulation. The online format worked well. Students were engaged, participating in real discussion instead of forced postings. An appendix of discussion questions and research exercises is included with the submission.
