

CANADA

Updated: June 10, 2022

Legal Research Assistance in Canada

Canadian organizations and websites that help users with their legal research questions. Several provinces provide content in English and French.

Organization	Website	Description of Services
Canadian Public Legal Education	https://www.lawcentralalberta.ca/en/canadian-public-legal-education-ple-organizations	This site connects users to public legal information sites located throughout the provinces and territories of Canada. Each site provides legal information, and a variety services, that could include topical legal information, links to educational classes, attorney referrals, or clinics.
Canadian Legal Information Institute	https://www.canlii.org/en/	This is a free legal research portal that provides access to current cases, legislation, and commentary on Canadian law. Users can access federal, provincial, and territorial law. This site is maintained by Lexum and is paid for by members of Canadian provincial and territorial law societies.
Federation of Law Societies of Canada	https://flsc.ca/about-us/our-members-canadas-law-societies/	The function of law societies is to regulate the legal profession in the public interest. To fulfill their public interest mandate, law societies set the standards for admission to the profession and the conduct of members in their province or territory. They audit and monitor the use of trust funds held by members of the profession. They also investigate complaints and discipline members of the profession who violate the required standards of conduct.